

BAY STATE'S SONS CELEBRATE HER DAY

One of the Most Elaborate of the Celebrations at the Jamestown Exposition.

OVATION TO GOVERNOR GUILD

He and Governor Swanson Exchange Calls and Are the Chief Speakers of Day.

JAMESTOWN EXPOSITION GROUNDS, VA., August 13.—Hundreds of citizens of the Old Bay State participated in the celebration of Massachusetts Day at the exposition to-day. It was one of the most successful of all the State celebrations which have taken place up to this time, and the ties which have bound the two colonial days were closer knit, and sentiments of mutual regard were exchanged by the speakers of the occasion.

The address of Governor Curtis Guild, Jr., of the Bay State, was the feature of the day. This eloquent Chief Executive made friends of every man, woman and child within the range of his voice, and his references to the historical connections between the two States were applauded vigorously.

The early hours of the morning were spent by the official party in exchanging calls with the Virginia officials. Governor Guild, with his party, reached the exposition about 10 o'clock, and en route to the Massachusetts Building they paid an official visit to Governor Swanson, of Virginia, at the Virginia Building.

An hour later Governor Swanson called upon the Governor of Massachusetts. He was accompanied by several members of his staff, attired in their full regiments.

At 11 o'clock the visitors from Massachusetts assembled in front of their State building and were photographed, leaving immediately after for the Auditorium where the exercises of the day were held. The Hon. Arthur Lord, of Boston, presided over the exercises, and before introducing the president of the exposition, he explained the historical significance of the Old State house which the Massachusetts commission had reproduced at the fair.

Cordial Welcome.
President Tucker welcomed the visitors on behalf of the management of the exposition, and in doing so, he said that no people had done more for the advancement of the great enterprise than the people of Massachusetts. Mr. Tucker's historical allusions were particularly appropriate.

He said that if Virginia could boast of her Patrick Henry, Massachusetts could boast of her James Otis; Virginia her Thomas Jefferson, Massachusetts her Samuel Adams; Virginia her Madison and Monroe, Massachusetts her John Adams and John Quincy Adams; and if Virginia gave to the country John Marshall, the great jurist, then was John Quincy Adams, of Massachusetts, who found him and placed him upon the Supreme Court bench of the country.

Governor Swanson was greeted heartily. He said that Massachusetts and Virginia belong to the same family of States. They began together in pioneer days, and have grown together through the generations of American history. He said the prosperity of both States was too patriotic not to rejoice in the achievement of the other. The Governor then showed what the country generally owed to Massachusetts.

Ovation to Governor Guild.
The ovation of the day was given to Governor Guild, of the Bay State, when he had been in the country for the first time. Lord, who had referred to the Governor's war record with the Rough Riders, Governor Guild said in part: "In the hall of the flags at the State house there stands the statue of the man who has been the greatest of our Massachusetts sons. The simple tablet at its base contains no record of his daring. The devoted leader of desperate charges strapped to a horse when his own mutilated body failed him, he preferred to be known to history as one who led the way not merely to reconquered land, but to Southern love. A citizen of Massachusetts, a soldier of the Union, he understood by patriotism a love for every State. 'Gentlemen of Virginia, in that spirit we have come to you as our fathers came before us, not with the pride that Massachusetts may have in her own achievements, but with the realization that she has in yours. We have come back to the spirit of the days when Massachusetts and Virginia stood together in the trenches at Yorktown. The vessels that steamed into harbor yesterday brought with them the Massachusetts naval brigade, the first sea militia organized in this country, which first to report at Philadelphia for duty in 1783, and eager as in the older days for not local, but for national defense, whether the point threatened were your own tide-water counties, or our own Cape Cod."

The day has come again, thank God, when no man asks what State a soldier or sailor served with. Southern seamen follow an admiral from Vermont and Northern riders cheer an Alabama leader. The seals of our two Commonwealths commemorate resistance to oppression.

The Bay State Day. In the party from Massachusetts were the following: His Excellency, Help! Help!

Give us a friendly "knee up" to clear our loitering summer goods and we'll give you a friendly "price down." No lots reserved. Everything goes under the price-hammer. The early word catches the plum.

Immediately following Governor Guild's speech the party returned to the Massachusetts Building, where luncheon was served by the commission to the visitors.

Parade and Reception.
At 2:30 o'clock the military parade took place. Governors Guild and Swanson reviewed the troops and naval reserves. First to file before the reviewing stand was the Twenty-third Infantry, then the Third Artillery and then Twelfth Cavalry of the United States troops encamped here. Next came the Massachusetts Naval Brigade, 500 strong, headed by one of the finest bands heard here during the exposition. Following the naval reserves came the brigade of North Carolina troops. This ended the review.

The commission gave a public reception after the parade to the Governor of Massachusetts and his party, and more than 5,000 people were entertained during the afternoon. During the reception Governor Guild read the proclamation, designating yesterday as Massachusetts Day, and received the building keys from the commission. This constituted the formal dedication of the building.

Governor Guild and many members of his party left to-night for Washington on a special steamer. The naval reserves sailed this afternoon for Boston.

COURT-MARTIAL TRIAL NEARING ITS CLOSE.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
NORFOLK, VA., August 13.—Evidence in the court-martial proceedings against Chaplain Harry W. Jones, U. S. N., at the Norfolk Navy Yard, was concluded to-day, the chaplain himself being the last one on the witness stand, and Lawyer James Kerr presented the argument for the defense. He argued that the chaplain was not guilty of the prosecution to-morrow, and the judge of the court will soon be in the hands of the Secretary of the Navy.

FAMILY REUNION OF JAQUELIN-CARYS

Descendants of These Noted Virginia Families Have Celebration at Exposition.

CROSS TO MISS DU BELLET

She Is Presented With Handsome Testimonial—Exercises Followed by Reception.

JAMESTOWN EXPOSITION, August 13.—The descendants of the famous Jaquelin-Cary families held their reunion in the Auditorium to-day, and the gathering was largely attended by representatives from all parts of the United States.

As usual with events of this kind, whose members are widely separated or have never before met, the opening hours of the program were devoted to forming acquaintanceships.

Dr. Daniel H. Morgan, surgeon, United States Navy, a great-grandson of General John Smith, and representing the Jaquelin-Smith family, was chairman of the exercises. Dr. Morgan opened the reunion by delivering a short historical review of the Jaquelin-Cary family, and of the 165 settlers who made the settlement.

Following Dr. Cary, Professor John Nicholas Ambler, of Winston, N. C., great-grandson of Colonel John Ambler, of Jamestown, Va., spoke on the achievements of the Anglo-Saxon race, and the value of the Jamestown settlement, 300 years ago, and how their "ashes have been washed on the shores of fame over all the world."

At the close of Professor Ambler's remarks, Mrs. Mildred Lewis Rutherford, of Athens, Ga., a representative of the Jaquelin-Smith-Rootes family, spoke on the kinship of the different branches of the family. Mrs. Rutherford also made a plea for greater work in the instructing of children in the early history of Virginia and of the South.

Following Mrs. Rutherford's remarks there was a short business session held, during which by-laws were adopted for a permanent organization, to be known as the Jaquelin-Cary family. The organization was started with about 200 members.

The day's exercises were wound up with a reception at No. 288 West Street, Norfolk, where a most pleasant evening was spent.

To-morrow the entire delegation will visit old Jamestown Island and the home of Edward Jaquelin.

Connection With Jamestown.

It is peculiarly fitting that this family should gather at the Jamestown Exposition, where the first settlement of the white man in America was commemorated in so many ways. Although Richard Ambler, the emigrant, did not bring the name into Virginia until a little more than 100 years after the founding and settlement of Jamestown, yet within the next 100 years that site and almost if not all Jamestown Island had become the ancestral home of all who bear the name and call Ambler blood.

Richard Ambler, the emigrant in 1716, was the son of John Ambler, of York, England, and Elizabeth Cary, daughter of Sir William Cary, a knight and wealthy man, who died about a dozen years after his arrival in Virginia. He married Elizabeth Jaquelin, the daughter of Edward Jaquelin and Martha Cary, his second wife, of James City, Virginia.

It is Elizabeth Jaquelin, the great-granddaughter of the emigrant, Miles Cary, who thus became the mother-ancestor of all who carry Ambler blood in Virginia, and whose blood runs in the veins of the Ambler family almost every family in Virginia who may have either attained wealth or achieved distinction. Edward Jaquelin died in 1730, reputed to have been one of the wealthiest men in the colony and about 100 years later Colonel John Ambler died, leaving an estate which yielded upon settlement $243,200.75.

Edward Ambler married Mary Cary, daughter of John Cary, a wealthy and successful merchant and business ability and most honorable distinction to a like-wise large and influential family connection, at which time the Ambler mansion on Jamestown Island became the central point about which wealth and beauty were wont to flit in the zenith days of its grandeur, and of which now remain but the fragments of crumbling walls of the Ambler mansion, and of the old church of still

NOW AFTER THE SOCIAL CLUBS

Captain Carpenter to Have Investigation Made of Reported Disorder at Pine Beach.

JAMESTOWN EXPOSITION GROUNDS, VA., August 13.—Captain Henry W. Carpenter, commandant of the Exposition Powhatan Guard, and also of the Pine Beach police force, returned to guard headquarters to-day, after an absence of several days on sick leave, and immediately thereafter issued orders for a rigid investigation of reports of disorder at several of the Pine Beach resorts last night and early this morning. Reports of disorder come from several social clubs still doing business there, and Captain Carpenter will endeavor to get enough evidence against them to cause a revocation of their licenses.

General Robertson, who commands the North Carolina militia, now in camp at the exposition, has been requested to place a provost guard at Pine Beach to keep the militiamen away from there after hours.

F. H. Blake, the employment agency operator, at Pine Beach and Richmond, recently fined by Justice Backus on several charges of obtaining money under false pretenses in dealing with those seeking employment, will have to stand trial on another warrant, charging a similar offense. The case will be heard at 10 o'clock to-morrow afternoon by Justice H. C. Groves, appointed to the magistracy by Judge Portlock yesterday. The fines imposed on Blake by Backus were merely nominal.

It is improbable that Justice Backus, whose administration of the law has been unsatisfactory to Captain Carpenter, will again serve as magistrate of the Exposition Police Court.

RETAILMERCHANTS HAVE MEETING

Furniture-Dealers of Virginia in Session With Them—Having Good Time.

JAMESTOWN EXPOSITION GROUNDS, August 13.—The first annual convention of the Retail Merchants' Association of Virginia was called to order in the Auditorium at 1 o'clock this afternoon. Meeting with these merchants was the Retail Furniture Dealers' Association of the State. Exposition President Tucker made the welcoming address before the merchants.

Norman H. Johnson, general counsel for the Virginia and North Carolina retail merchants, addressed. Later in the afternoon the address of President M. Tinsdall, of the Retail Merchants' Association, was delivered, and this evening those here for the convention went on an excursion about the harbor.

Commissioned Officers of the Uniformed Rank. Session. NORFOLK, VA., August 13.—The convention of commissioned officers of the Uniformed Rank, Knights of the Maccabees of the World, in biennial session jointly with the biennial encampment of the uniformed rank at the Jamestown Exposition re-elected Major-General W. H. Stover, of Cleveland, O., as commander-in-chief, and also selected Lexington, Ky., as the next place of meeting. Additional companies arrived to-day and joined the camp at the exposition. The competitive drill for $500 silver trophy cup began on the Lee Parade Grounds at the exposition to-day.

The judges will not announce the winner of the contest until to-morrow.
